Kneada

MY ULTIMATE COOKIE RECIPE PACK

Everything you need to bake, package, and sell NYC-style cookies that look as good as they taste

@KNEADA.BAKES

Contents:

- Before You Start – Method overview, how I package, portion & customise cookies
- The Method – Step-by-step cookie dough process
- Baking & Reheating – How to bake from frozen & warm cookies at home

- Flavour Recipes
  - Double Choc Nutella Stuffed
  - Kinderella Stuffed (+ base recipe)
  - Biscoff Stuffed
  - Cinnamon Swirl
  - Maple Pecan
  - Oreo
  - Funfetti
  - Raspberry White Choc
  - Caramel Shortcake
  - Nanaimo Bar
  - Strawberry Shortcake
  - Red Velvet
  - M&M
  - Mini Egg
  - Choc Walnut
  - Nutella Stuffed

- Tools & Supplies – My go-to's for cookies
- Extra's - My make ahead method & tips to create your own flavours
- Cookie Warming Card Template – Print-ready insert for your customers

What You Need to Know Before You Start

This pack is based on my NYC-style cookie method — thick, chunky, and packed with flavour.

It wasn't as simple as following a recipe and getting perfect results right away. I had so many failed batches — cookies that spread too much, were flat, greasy, fell apart... the list goes on.

Eventually, I realised that with cookies, it's less about the recipe and more about the technique. How you mix the dough, how long you mix it for, and even how you shape it — all of that matters more than people think.

I've got a good few tips & tricks to share to make cookie baking life easier!

What You Need to Know Before You Start

Most of the mixing is done by hand or on a very low speed, using the paddle attachment . If you over- or under-mix, or skip a step, the result will be completely different. Believe me, I learnt the hard way.

After a lot of testing and experimenting, I figured out what works best for me. All of my cookie recipes use cold unsalted butter — no melting and no creaming with sugar!

I make cookie dough in small batches — no more than 15 cookies at a time. Yes, I've had three mixers going at once before, but I still believe the quality comes from focusing on smaller, more manageable portions.

I do update this pack every now and then, so you will receieve any fututе updates totally for free, to ensure you never miss out!

In this guide, I've included my best-selling cookie flavours. While the recipes follow the same base method, each one has been slightly tweaked to match the flavour profile and ingredients.

The method is what ties them all together — and it's what makes the difference. You'll need to pay close attention to mixing speed and timing at every stage.

Another key step - pulling apart the dough once it comes out of the mixer, before you portion it. I never roll or pack the dough tightly in my hands — I gently press it together just enough to hold its shape.

This is especially important for stuffed cookies, so the filling doesn't spill out during baking.

this is the dense dough when it's finished mixing

this is how it should look once you've pulled it apart

this is how your cookie dough balls should look when they go in the freezer

This technique is what gives my cookies their signature chunky texture without being too dense.

Every single dough ball is weighed using a digital scale. It's the only way to achieve consistency.

You can also prepare the dough in advance and freeze it. I usually make my dough the day before, freeze it overnight, then bake the cookies straight from the freezer. This helps them hold their shape and structure in the oven.

Even with a foolproof recipe, you'll still sometimes get an odd-shaped cookie. Don't worry! Use a spatula to gently reshape it right after it comes out of the oven, while it's still soft.

I do recommend using a stand mixer. I've never made these cookies with a hand mixer, so I can't offer advice on that.

spread too much too greasy and thin

texture & shape perfect

All these cookies were made using the exact same recipes (Nutella and Kinderella). They were actually when I was training a new staff member and trying to emphasise how important the method is, not just the recipe!

You can tweak and tailor these recipes however you like. Feel free to change the flavours and come up with your own ideas — that's the fun part!

I've used these recipes to make mini cookies and cookie sandwiches. To do this, simply weigh each cookie to be around 50g instead of 100g. (I haven't tested this method with stuffed cookies yet — but there's always room for more experimenting!)

I've also added icing and corporate logos on top for events and custom orders.

When packaging my cookies, I used flat pizza-style boxes with a sheet of greaseproof paper on the bottom and a cookie warming card on top.

For selling individually at events, I used small greaseproof pouches sealed with a branded sticker.

You can package your cookies however you like — just make sure whatever you choose keeps them fresh.

mini cookies

s'mores cookie sandwich

my cookie boxes

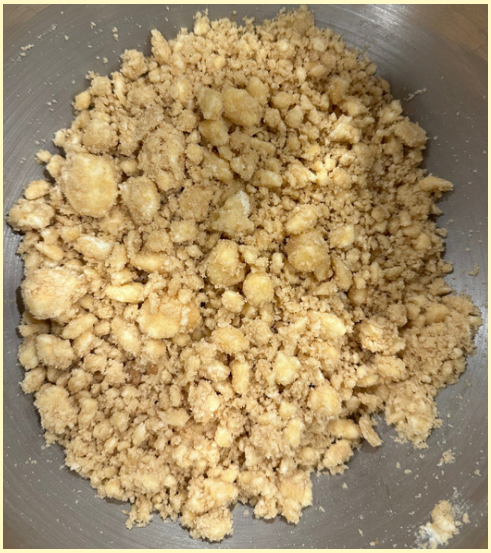

The Method

SUGAR & BUTTER

Add your caster sugar and light brown sugar to your mixing bowl and hand mix briefly. Chop your butter into small cubes, around 2-3cm each and add to your sugar - ensure your butter is cold.

Mix on a slow speed until they start coming together (NOT creamed), you should have little lumps of butter coated with sugar but not too fine..

Like this

CHOCOLATE

I hand mix the chips before they go in so the choc is evenly spread. They go in whilst the mixer is still going at a slow speed, continue mixing until they are evenly distributed.

It's important to keep an eye on your cookie dough constantly, over/under mixing can cause problems when it comes to baking.

DRY INGREDIENTS

Hand mix your flours, baking powder, salt & any extras (sprinkles, cocoa powder, biscuit crumbs etc) BEFORE it goes in so everything is combined.

Add your dry ingredients to your dough and mix on a low speed.

You almost can't over mix at this stage, so keep it going until the ingredients are evenly distributed with small sugary/floury/buttery nuggets.

EGGS

Lastly add your eggs, watch this step carefully and mix on a slow speed. I mix the eggs before they go in, so the yolk and white is already combined. I use medium eggs (weight approx. 50g)

At this stage, it won't take long for your dough to come together, once it has almost come to one big batch of dough that is when you stop and it is ready.

You should also hear a change in the mixer, it will sound like it is starting to struggle - don't go further than this!

DOUGH

I spread my dough onto a baking tray and pull it apart before forming the cookie balls. This is an important step in my process which I would never skip. If you are working in a hot climate, you may need to refrigerate your dough for a few minutes here.

You want to take the larger lumps and loosely pull them into smaller chunks.

Pulled apart to create texture

The dense dough straight from the mixer

Once this is done, I start balling them up, weighing every single cookie - I aim for 100g each. Gently grab the dough and weigh it, then loosely ball it together and set it aside.

Once all your cookies are weighed out, press the dough together, creating a ball but not squeezing too hard. (This is the stage you would add your cores if you are making stuffed cookies). You still want to have some texture on the cookie so it bakes nice and chunky.

Chill them in the freezer for at least four hours.

BAKE

I line a large baking sheet with parchment paper and use mini magnets to hold the sheet in place. The cookies go straight from frozen to the oven.

I place 6-7 cookies on each sheet, evenly spread, so they have room to bake in the oven and bake in a preheated oven: 14 minutes at 180C (fan oven) or 19 minutes at 355F (gas/conventional oven). Don't overcrowd your oven or your baking tray.

I like to bake one test cookie when trying a new method or recipe, so I can check the bake time and temp of my oven without sacrificing the whole batch. The rest can stay chilling in the freezer.

Cookies often will not look fully baked when they come out of the oven but it is important to trust in this recipe & method. After coming out the oven, they will continue to bake on the hot tray, leave them on the tray and do not remove until they are cool.

I leave them rest for at least 30 minutes, you can put them in the fridge if you'd like to speed up this process.

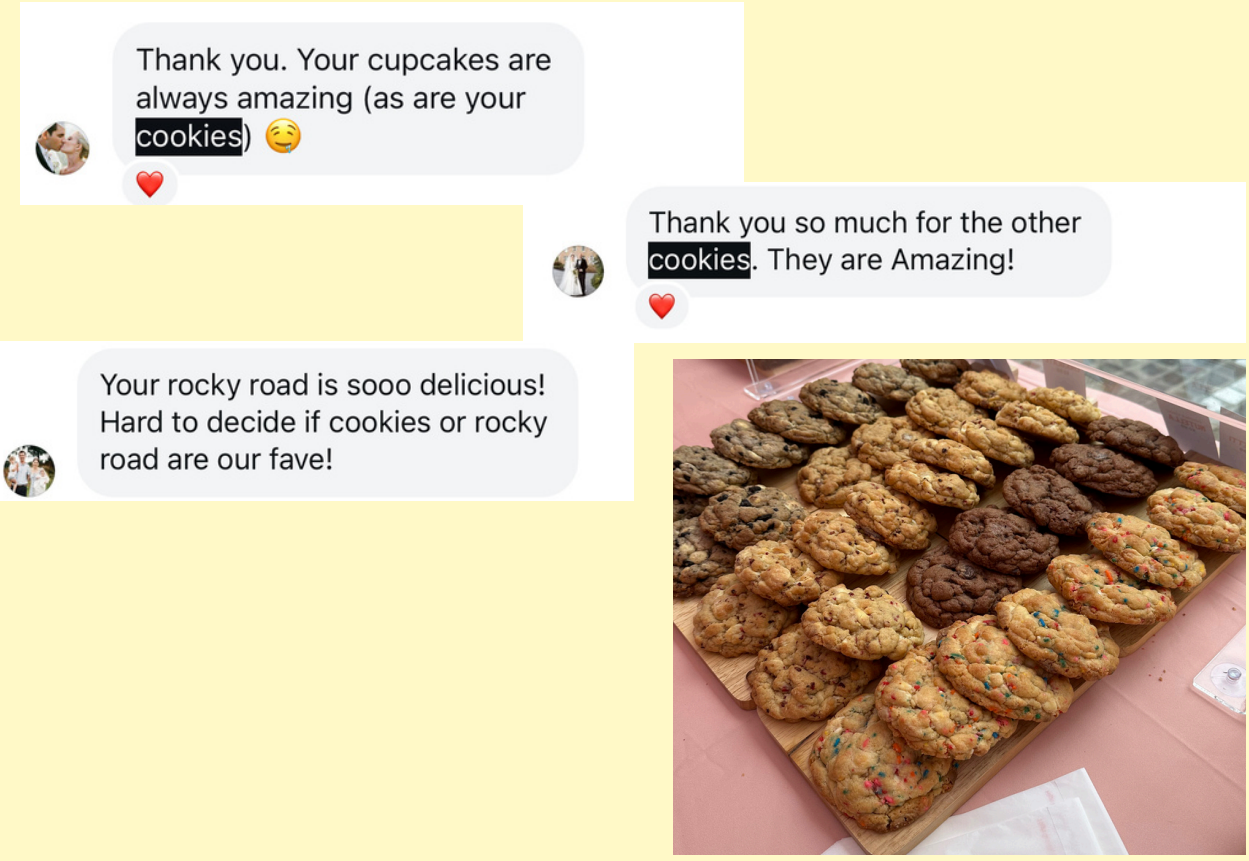

EATING (THE BEST PART)

Cookies can be enjoyed freshly baked, cool or reheated in the microwave or oven.

For the microwave - heat in 10-15 second bursts and check each time. In the oven, preheat to 160C and bake them for 4 minutes. The reheating methods are perfect if you prefer warm and gooey cookies!

I have included a template of a cookie warming guide for you to use.

I have literally made these cookies thousands of times now and I still love them to this day. I would chose my own cookie over a store bought cookie any day of the week and my customers would agree!

Baking in a New Country (Canada Test 2026)

I've recently moved in Canada and wanted to test this cookie method using ingredients that were different from what I normally bake with, plus a gas oven (which was completely new to me).

I'm adding this update because I know many of you bake in different countries, use different ovens, or can't always get the exact ingredients listed earlier on. For this test, I used the exact same method outlined in this pack.

My goal was to keep the process identical and only adjust for ingredient availability and oven differences.

Ingredient Swaps

- Self-raising flour: Not available, so I used all-purpose flour with baking powder (very close substitute)

- Sugar: I couldn't find caster sugar, but berry sugar is a very fine granulated sugar and worked well as a substitute

- Light brown sugar: Not available, so I used golden yellow sugar, which is close in both flavour and moisture

The dough consistency stayed very close to what I'm used to, which told me the swaps were solid.

Oven Testing (Gas Oven + Fahrenheit)

I had to experiment with bake times because I had never used a gas oven before and I normally bake in Celsius, not Fahrenheit.

- Higher temperature / shorter bake = limited spread and underbaked centres

- Lower temperature / longer bake = better spread, but very pale cookies and long bake times

I baked one test cookie at a time so I didn't sacrifice the full batch. This made it much easier to dial things in.

I tried thawing the dough for 10-15 mins before which helped with the spread a little, and the shape came out exactly as I wanted. Not too far but perfectly chunky.

I wanted to share this test to show you that this method is robust. Even on the other side of the world, with different ingredients and a completely different oven, I was still able to replicate the same cookie style.

If you ever can't find a listed ingredient, need help with substitutes or are unsure about measurements or oven behaviour, message me & we'll work it out together.

Baking always involves testing. Every oven behaves differently, and that's normal. I can share what worked for me — but I always recommend baking a test cookie first, just like I did.

Final baking notes

Fan oven: 180°C for 14 minutes, baked straight from frozen

Conventional oven (gas): 355°F for 19 minutes, usually baked from frozen. If your cookies don't spread much, you can let them thaw slightly before baking

I like using sheet pans (not silicone). If you're doing multiple batches, make sure the pan cools completely between each one. Otherwise, the residual heat can make the bottoms bake up harder than you want.

Some of my recipes use self-raising flour and some use all-purpose flour with baking powder. This is simply because I always had easy access to self-raising flour back home in the UK. Since being in Canada and testing them here, using all-purpose flour with baking powder works just as well.

North American flours generally have a higher protein content than UK flours, if your cookies aren't spreading, try reducing the baking powder!

This means the dough can be stronger and hold its shape more, so you may notice your cookies spread less when baking in Canada or the US. If you're based there, this is something to keep in mind.

You may notice I don't use vanilla. Mainly because I once had to go without it after running out, and I genuinely didn't notice a difference in flavour — so I ditched it. But if you like using it, feel free to add it!

NUTELLA STUFFED COOKIES

This was a staple on my menu because really, who doesn't like Nutella?

It's a chunky cookie with milk and dark chocolate chips with a gooey Nutella core - a level up from your regular chocolate cookie.

I use frozen Nutella to create the core, you want to freeze the cores at least the day before. I use round ice cube trays as they are neat and easy to pop out, but you can use a spoon to portion the cores out on a baking sheet. I usually freeze a whole trays worth (x21), but you should need 15 for this recipe.

Weigh out all ingredients beforehand in separate bowls, so they are ready when you need them.

INGREDIENTS
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
155g Caster Sugar
50g Dark (54%) Chocolate Chips
300g Milk Chocolate Chips
475g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
25g Cocoa Powder
Pinch of Salt
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk

KINDERELLA STUFFED/CHOC CHIP BASE RECIPE

This was my top selling cookie flavour and loved by all who tried them.

It's a chunky cookie with milk and white chocolate chips with a hazelnut creme core (think the inside of a kinder bueno!) - a unique twist on the OG choc chip cookie. If you want to make OG choc chip cookies, you can use this recipe as your base just skip the hazelnut cores!

I freeze hazelnut creme in the round ice cube tray to create the core, you want to freeze the cores at least the day before. (I like to use Black Milk Cereal Hazelnut Creme)

Ensure the hazelnut cores and fully covered when you ball the dough up, it can go quite runny in the oven and you don't want it to spill out. These ones might take a bit of extra time to cool as well, and allow the core to firm up.

INGREDIENTS
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
150g White Chocolate Chips
150g Milk Chocolate Chips
490g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk

This is my go-to base recipe whenever I'm experimenting with new flavours or testing cookie ideas. It's the foundation I come back to again and again because it's so reliable and easy to adapt.

I've used this dough to make mini chocolate chip cookies, which I then sandwiched together with marshmallow. The process stayed exactly the same — I simply weighed the dough balls at 50g instead of 100g and baked them for around 9 minutes (180c fan oven)

I've also used this base to create a vanilla pudding–stuffed cookie, which I highly recommend trying. I made the pudding using vanilla Jell-O, following the packet instructions but halving the quantities so I didn't make too much. I poured the pudding into an ice cube tray and froze it for a couple of hours before stuffing it into the cookie dough.

The result was a gooey vanilla pudding centre that tasted incredible inside the cookie. I was slightly worried it might be too runny, but they baked up perfectly.

Disclaimer: I didn't sell this variation, as I tested it after I stopped selling baked products — but my family absolutely loved them.

BISCOFF STUFFED COOKIES

This first cookie flavour I ever sold - for good reason.

It's a chunky cookie with milk and white chocolate chips and crushed Biscoff biscuits with a Biscoff spread core. If you like Biscoff, you're sure to love this!

I freeze Biscoff spread in the round ice cube tray to create the core, you want to freeze the cores at least the day before.

I melt the spread and portion it in to the tray, as it's easier to portion when it's a bit runny.

Note: I always crush the biscoff biscuits by hand, a food processor will make them too fine, and I like the crunch from the bigger biscuity chunks.

Ingredients
185g Unsalted Butter (cold)
140g Light Brown Sugar
130g Caster Sugar
110g Milk Chocolate Chips
110g White Chocolate Chips
430g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
110g Biscoff Crumb
2 Eggs + 1 yolk

CINNAMON SWIRL COOKIES

The perfect fall flavour and a real winter warmer! Buttery cinnamon swirl pockets, finished with a sweet glaze and a dusting of cinnamon. I can't WAIT for you to try this one!

Make the cinnamon swirl filling first. Melt the butter, then mix it with the brown sugar and cinnamon. Fold in the flour until combined, then spread onto a tray and freeze for 1 hour. Once firm, chop the filling into chunks — they don't need to be the same size! Keep the chunks in the freezer until you're ready to use them.

Add the cinnamon swirl chunks right at the end of the dough prep, AFTER the eggs. You don't want them to break down and mix into the dough, just fold them through so they stay as little pockets of buttery cinnamon sugar that melt into the cookie as they bake.

Dough prep is the same method as always. I add the 1.5 tsp cinnamon in with the dry ingredients to ensure an even distribution of flavour.

CINNAMON SWIRL COOKIES

For the glaze, 40g gives the perfect flavour but is a little runny. If you're packaging the cookies, you may want to add a little extra powdered sugar to thicken it, or chill the glaze in the fridge before using.

To finish, pipe the glaze over the cookies while they're still slightly warm. This allows it to naturally run and spread over the tops. Finish with a light dusting of cinnamon!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown sugar
95g Caster Sugar
300g White Chocolate
475g All Purpose flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
1.5 tsp Cinnamon
Pinch salt
2 eggs + 1 yolk

Cinnamon Swirl Filling
55g Unsalted Butter
100g Light Brown Sugar
2 tsp Cinnamon
15g All Purpose flour

Glaze
2tsp Milk
40g Powdered Sugar

MAPLE PECAN COOKIES

This one tastes just like a maple pecan danish in cookie form! Of course, these are sweet and indulgent cookies, just like maple syrup flavour should be! I'm in Canada, so it was only right to create this cookie, but if you don't love super-sweet flavours, this one may not be for you.

Some cookies are better warm & gooey, but I like this one when it's fully cool.

Before you start, roast the pecans: roast 125g chopped pecans at 350°F for 8 minutes, tossing halfway through. Allow them to cool completely before using. These will be added with the dry ingredients when mixing.

The dough prep is the same method as always. You'll mix the maple syrup and maple extract into the eggs first. Mix them together thoroughly by hand before adding them to the dough for the best distribution of flavour.

MAPLE PECAN COOKIES

Make the maple filling ahead of time so it has time to cool and firm up slightly in the fridge. Add all the filling ingredients to a pan and heat over medium heat, stirring constantly until everything is combined and the butter has melted. Don't cook or boil, otherwise the filling will become too thick. It took me around 3 mins to bring everything together. Transfer the filling to a dish and allow it to cool slightly before using. This can be stored in the fridge for 5-7 days!

Once you bake your cookies & they come out of the oven, leave them to cool for around 5–7 minutes, then use a piping bag to inject a small amount of the maple filling into the centre of each cookie.

You don't need much — just enough to give you that delicious maple flavour running through the middle!

Allow the cookies to cool completely, then drizzle the maple glaze and finish with a sprinkle of crushed pecans. You can also add a small sprinkle of flaked sea salt on top to help balance the sweetness.

MAPLE PECAN COOKIES

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter
165g Light Brown sugar
95g Caster Sugar
100g White Chocolate Chips
100g Milk Chocolate Chips
470g AP flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
125g Chopped Roasted Pecans
30g Chopped Pecans to finish
Pinch salt
2 eggs + 1 yolk
50g Maple syrup
1 tsp Maple Extract

Maple filling
60g Maple syrup
45g Light Brown Sugar
35g Unsalted Butter
10g AP Flour
½ tsp Maple Extract
Pinch salt

Glaze
10ml Milk
80g powdered sugar
10ml Maple syrup

OREO COOKIES

My personal favourite.

It’s a chunky cookie with milk chocolate chips and crushed Oreo pieces with a white chocolate Oreo core.

I create the core by mixing melted white chocolate and a finely crushed oreo crumb together, then portion it into the round ice cube tray and freeze. Make sure you use high quality white chocolate for this, so it melts well and doesn't go lumpy or burn.

Note: I always crush the Oreos by hand, so there is a mixture of small and big chunks. This gives a really good texture.

You will need a finer crumb to create the core, as the bigger lumps will be too big!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
350g Chocolate Chips (I switch between milk and white, can’t decide on my favourite!)
490g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
85g Oreo Crumb
2 Eggs + 1 yolk

FUNFETTI COOKIES

Filled with white chocolate and rainbow sprinkles, these cookies not only look good but they taste delicious and make a super fun addition to your cookie menu!

The white chocolate coupled with the rainbow sprinkles gives a really sweet flavour, and they are perfect for birthdays and celebrations.

Make sure you use really good quality rainbow sprinkles - some may lose their colour when baking.

My favourite were from Get Baked, but Walmart also sell their own brand sprinkles which work well.

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
350g White Chocolate Chips
390g All Purpose Flour
110g Self Raising Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
95g Rainbow Sprinkles
2 Eggs + 1 yolk

RASPBERRY WHITE CHOC COOKIES

Packed with freeze dried raspberry and white chocolate chunks, these are so good if you prefer a fruity flavour.

I don't use extra flavouring in these cookies, the freeze dried raspberry should be powerful enough to flavour the whole cookie.

Similar to Funfetti, these cookies do not have a core, so be sure not to pack them together too lightly and make the dough too dense.

I started offering these as a limited edition flavour, but they quickly made their way to my permanent menu because they were so popular!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
350g White Chocolate Chips
390g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
20g Freeze Dried Raspberry
2 Eggs + 1 yolk

CARAMEL SHORTCAKE COOKIES

If I could describe this one, it would be like a TWIX in cookie form. The dough is packed with mini fudge chunks, milk chocolate chips, shortcake biscuit chunks and stuffed with a square of Cadbury caramel chocolate in the middle.

These cookies tend to spread less in the oven, and stay more in a ball shape - don't stress though - that is totally normal and so worth it once you taste them!

In this recipe, I add the fudge chunks at the same time as the milk chocolate. You want to add the shortcake biscuit at the end and ensure you add the biscuits whole. They are soft enough that the mixture will naturally break them up, and you don't want them to crumble too much. Add the Cadbury caramel square at the end as you would with the regular stuffed cookies.

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
300g Milk Chocolate Chips
70g Fudge Chunks
410g All Purpose Flour
90g Self Raising Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
Pinch of Salt
90g Shortcake Biscuit
Cadbury Caramel Bar
2 Eggs + 1 yolk

NANAIMO BAR COOKIE

This cookie was inspired by the famous Nanaimo Bar and created in celebration of Canada Day!

For the custard centres, I used Birds Custard Powder and simply followed the instructions on the tin, but made around ⅓ of the stated quantities and added a small dash of maple syrup for a little extra sweetness. This made the perfect amount for 15 cookie cores. Once the custard had cooled slightly, I poured it into my usual ice cube tray mould and froze the centres before making the cookie dough.

This cookie dough is made using the exact same step by step method as mentioned earlier. The only difference is that I added the crushed graham crackers and desiccated coconut to the dry ingredients (along with the flour, cocoa powder, baking powder and salt), you'll notice the flour is reduced to compensate for the graham cracker crumb.

NANAIMO BAR COOKIE

Once baked and completely cooled, I piped a thin layer of ganache over the top using a piping bag, swirling it to cover most of the cookie without making it too rich. I finished each one with a sprinkle of desiccated coconut. These genuinely taste just like a Nanaimo Bar in cookie form and are one of my favourite special flavours I've made!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
155g Caster Sugar
300g Milk Chocolate Chips
50g Dark Chocolate Chips
375g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
70g Desiccated Coconut
100g Graham Cracker Crumb
18g Cocoa Powder
Pinch of Salt
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk

Custard Centres
20g Birds Custard Powder
15g Berry Sugar
200ml Milk
Dash of Maple Syrup

Ganache
200g Dark Chocolate
110ml Half & Half Cream (10%)

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE COOKIES

A simple twist on Raspberry White Chocolate, but it's just soooo good! A summery flavour staple that I can't get enough of right now. I actually LOVE the fact that these use all white chocolate. The freeze-dried strawberries and biscuit chunks balance the flavours & sweetness perfectly.

The dough is made using the same method as always. I added the freeze-dried strawberries in with the flour mixture as one of the dry ingredients.
The only thing I did differently was adding the shortcake biscuits whole. If you crush them beforehand, they're more likely to disintegrate & become another dry ingredient instead of giving you those biscuit chunks throughout the cookie.
Once the dry ingredients have almost finished mixing in, add the whole shortcake biscuits just before the eggs go in. Your mixer should be strong enough to break them into chunky pieces without turning them into crumbs.

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
95g Caster Sugar
165g Light Brown Sugar
300g White Chocolate Chips
475g All Purpose Flour
35g Freeze-Dried Strawberry
90g Shortcake Biscuits
2 tsp Baking Powder
2 Eggs + 1 Egg Yolk
Pinch of Salt

RED VELVET COOKIES

Red velvet is one of those flavours I never get bored of — whether it's in cake or cookie form. It's rich without being overly sweet, and just works.

These cookies are super simple, a soft chocolate cookie base, boosted with red food colouring and packed with white chocolate chips.

I know this isn't 'traditional' red velvet, but it works well and tastes great. The flavours balance each other perfectly without being sickly. The red colour paste goes in with the eggs, I pre mix it with the eggs for even distribution when it goes in the mixer

They're also super versatile — perfect for Valentine's Day, Halloween (I call them blood red velvet cookies), and even Christmas. I like adding them to my cookie variety boxes too for a pop of colour!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
150g Caster Sugar
170g Light Brown Sugar
330g White Choc Chips
470g All Purpose Flour
25g Cocoa Powder
Pinch of Salt
2 tsp Baking Powder
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk
3/4 tsp Red Food Colour

M&M

I've had so many requests for an M&M cookie recipe, so here it is!

For this one, I've kept the same base dough and method as outlined earlier in the pack, the exact process I rely on across my cookie recipes for consistent, bakery-style results every time. The only change here is adding the M&M's in with the dry ingredients. Everything else stays the same. I kept this as a classic dough base because the M&M's and chocolate chips already bring a lot of sweetness, so it balances everything out without being overly sugary.

These cookies are packed with mix-ins, which helps them bake up thick, chunky, and full of texture. You can press a few extra M&M's on top as soon as they come out of the oven for a pop of colour. I used regular M&M's instead of the mini baking ones — I personally prefer the flavour and texture, but either works!

Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
250g Milk Chocolate Chips
470g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
150g regular M&Ms
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk
Pinch of Salt

MINI EGG COOKIES

Mini Eggs are one of those flavours that instantly signal Easter and customers go crazy for them every year.

They're perfect for Easter pre-orders, spring markets, and limited edition drops. They also look amazing in mixed boxes thanks to the pop of colour, a guaranteed seasonal bestseller.

I like to mix about 100g of crushed Mini Eggs into the dough and save the rest to press into the tops once the cookies are balled. I'll even roll the dough balls in the crushed shell crumbs to give them that extra bakery-style finish. You can play around with how much you mix in versus how much you press on top.

Mini Eggs are pretty tough to chop because of the thick shell! I usually crush them using the side of a knife, but a rolling pin works as well.

Mini Egg Cookies
Ingredients
230g Cold Unsalted Butter
160g Caster Sugar
170g Light Brown Sugar
200g Milk Choc Chips
100g White Choc Chips
500g All Purpose Flour
Pinch of Salt
2 ¼ tsp Baking Powder
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk
150g Mini Eggs (crushed)

Choc Walnut Cookies
Ingredients
230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
200g Milk Chocolate Chips
490g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk
Pinch of Salt
100g Walnuts

You can also use this as an OG chocolate chip cookie base — just swap the 100g walnuts for 100g chocolate chips (milk, dark or white, whatever you prefer).

Nutella Stuffed Cookies

Ingredients

230g Unsalted Butter (cold)
165g Light Brown Sugar
95g Caster Sugar
300g Milk Chocolate Chips
490g All Purpose Flour
2 tsp Baking Powder
2 Eggs + 1 Yolk
Pinch of Salt
14 frozen nutella cores

The beauty of these cookies is how easy they are to customise.

For example, I used the Oreo dough and stuffed it with Nutella—such a good combo. Once you've got the base right, you can mix, match and create endless flavour variations.

The recipe itself is part of the process, what really matters is the method and techniques, this creates consistency.

All of my cookies follow the exact same step-by-step process, no matter the flavour. Once your method is solid, experimenting becomes easy because you're not changing how you bake — just what you add.

TOOLS & SUPPLIES

- Chocolate: Callebaut callets are my go to. You can buy them in bulk 2.5kg/10kg bags. Expensive but worth the taste in my opinion

- Flour: Matthews Cotswold Flour 10.5% protein (UK specific!). All brands will bake differently, test a few in your area to find the perfect one for you, it can really alter the taste, bake and texture. Plain flour = all-purpose flour. Robin Hood Flour (Canada) 12-14% protein

- Sugar: Tate and Lyle (UK) caster sugar = Rogers (Canada) berry sugar. Light brown sugar = golden yellow sugar

- Butter: unsalted & cold always

- Cocoa powder: Cadbury Bournville Cocoa (UK) or HERSHEY'S Unsweetened Cocoa Powder (Canada/USA)

- Mixer: Kitchen Aid 6.9 L Artisan Stand Mixer

- Parchment paper: I use thin, unbleached greaseproof paper. I tried silicone mats but DO NOT like the result so don't recommend Cores: the ice cube tray I use.

I always make these ahead of time so they are ready to go inside the cookie dough

My make-ahead tip 🍪

I always make my cookie dough at least the day before I need it. I portion the dough into balls, freeze them in an airtight container, and they'll keep beautifully for up to 3–4 weeks.

This method makes life so much easier — I can batch-make dough whenever I have time, and they're ready to bake straight from the freezer whenever I need them. It's perfect for large or last-minute orders because all the prep is already done ahead of time.

It's also a great way to offer variety boxes to your customers — just keep a mix of flavours in your freezer stock and let them pick their favourites.

If you ever get a late-night cookie craving (I definitely do), you can literally just bake one or two for yourself — no fussing about a whole batch or worrying about leftovers.

My tip: When you're trying a new recipe like this, I always recommend baking just one cookie first. It's the easiest way to see how your oven behaves so you can figure out the perfect timing and temperature before committing to the whole batch.

That way, if any tweaks are needed, you can adjust straight away — no wasted dough, and you'll know exactly how to nail it next time.

Creating Your Own Cookie Flavours 🍪

One of my favourite things about this bundle is that you don't have to stick to the flavours included here!

Once you have a reliable cookie base, you can use it as a starting point to create your own flavours and this is actually how I develop many of my cookies.

When I'm experimenting with new flavours, I use two recipes in this bundle as my starting points:

Kinderella Stuffed Cookie: my base for experimenting with vanilla cookie flavours

Double Choc Nutella Stuffed Cookie: my base for experimenting with chocolate cookie flavours

When using these as a base, just leave out the filling/core and use the recipe ratios as your starting point.

From there, you can experiment with different flavours, mix-ins and fillings to create something completely new.

You don't need to create a brand-new recipe from scratch every time — you already have a tested foundation to work from.

You can create SO many new combo's just by mixing parts from the recipes already included in this bundle. The method and mixing process stays the same — always! That's the beauty of having a reliable base recipe

For example:
Biscoff stuffed with a chocolate dough instead, or strawberry shortcake with chocolate dough. Or the coconut and custard from the Nanaimo cookie but with a vanilla dough (YUM)

Think about the flavours you already have recipes for and ask yourself: “What would happen if I put these two together?”

That's often where the best ideas come from! Have a new idea? Let's work it out..

If you have a cookie flavour you’d love to try but aren’t quite sure how to turn it into a recipe, don't be afraid to send me a message.

Tell me what you’re thinking and we can work through the ingredients and ratios to figure out the best way to create it.

That's part of the fun of developing cookies, you don't need to have it all figured out before you start experimenting!

I'll still be experimenting too. I'll continue developing new cookie flavours and adding them to this bundle, so you'll get all future recipe updates FREE when you purchase.

So use the recipes in this bundle as more than just a collection of flavours. Use them as your starting point for creating your own.

FINAL NOTE

I hope you love these recipes as much as I do. If you have any questions or feedback, feel free to reach out — I'm always happy to help! 💜

If you want to make more sales, increase your orders and build a loyal customer base, check out my marketing guide. Specifically designed for bakers to market and sell your bakes, tried and tested in my own business for over 10 years!

Click here for my guide

If you want to get my best selling recipes for cupcakes and brownies, you can find them here

HOW TO WARM YOUR COOKIES AT HOME

1

HEAT IN THE OVEN
(PRE HEAT TO 160C)

04:00

2

LEAVE TO COOL
(RESIST!)

01:00

3

EAT. ENJOY. SHARE.
(INSTA FRIENDLY!)

00:00

OUR TIP: Add a scoop of icecream for the ultimate indulgent dessert